CIA Defender

RICHARD STARNE'S contention that Wise and Ross, authors of "The Invisible Government", "have done what they could to avoid letting Communist agents use their book by refusing to sanction translated editions in communist bloc nations," is pure bunk. Communist governments never honor copyrights or patents. I guess the fact that galls Mr. Starnes is that there are certain places (CIA) which a Press Pass won't unlock. Like a vindictive, pouting child he throws rocks at it, knowing full well the CIA can neither deny nor honor charges, without giving the Soviet Embassy another bundle of information for their files.
